The PowerPoint .pptx file format called "PresentationML" for Presentation Markup Language (PML) contains separate structures for all the complex parts of a PowerPoint presentation.[266][267] The specification documents run to over six thousand pages.[268] Because of the widespread use of PowerPoint, the standardized file formats are considered important for the long-term access to digital documents in library collections and archives, according to the U.S. Library of Congress.[269] PowerPoint 2013 and PowerPoint 2016 provide options to save default saving to ISO/IEC 29500 Strict format, but the initial default setting remains Transitional, for compatibility with legacy features incorporating binary data in existing documents.[270] PowerPoint 2013 or PowerPoint 2016 will both open and save files in the former binary format (.ppt), for compatibility with older versions of the program (but not versions older than PowerPoint 97).[248][271] In saving to older formats, these versions of PowerPoint will check to assure that no features have been introduced into the presentation which are incompatible with the older formats.[257] PowerPoint 2013 and 2016 will also save a presentation in many other file formats, including PDF format, MPEG-4 or WMV video, as a sequence of single-picture files using image formats including GIF, JPEG, PNG, TIFF, and some older formats), and as a single presentation file in which all slides are replaced with pictures. pp. 4, 15. Gaskins says that he thought of "PowerPoint" based on the product's goal of "empowering" individual presenters, and sent that name to the lawyers for clearance, while all the documentation was hastily revised.[33] Funding to complete development of PowerPoint was assured in mid-January 1987, when a new Apple Computer venture capital fund, called Apple's Strategic Investment Group,[34] selected PowerPoint to be its first investment.[23] In 1971 A month later, on February 22, 1987, Forethought announced PowerPoint at the Personal Computer Forum in Phoenix; John Sculley, the CEO of Apple, appeared the announcement and said "We see desktop presentation as potentially a bigger market for Apple than desktop publishing." [35] PowerPoint 1.0 for Macintosh shipped from manufacturing on April 20, 1987, and the first production run of 10,000 units was sold out.[36] Acquisition by Microsoft (1987-1992) By early 1987, Microsoft was starting to plan a new application to create presentations, an activity led by Jeff Raikes, who was head of marketing for the Applications Division.[37] Microsoft assigned an internal group to write a specification and plan for a new presentation product.[38] They contemplated an acquisition to speed up development, and in early 1987 Microsoft sent a letter of intent to acquire Dave Winer's product called MORE, an outlining program that could print its outlines as bullet charts.[39] During this preparatory activity Raikes discovered that a program specifically to make overhead presentations was already being developed by Forethought, Inc. and that it was nearly completed.[37] Raikes and others visited Forethought on February 6, 1987, for a confidential demonstration.[23].173 Raikes later recounted his reaction to seeing PowerPoint and his report about it to Bill Gates, who was initially skeptical:[37] I thought, "software to do overheads—that's a great idea."
